lex_occ="fs"	fs_type="commphras"	commphras_type="situational"		Die Jugend ist eine schöne Zeit.	Situationally bound communicative phrasemes refer to a specific pattern of action (cf. Germ. Handlungsmuster) while fulfilling social functions. In other words, they serve to fulfil specific speech acts in a conventional way. Examples are the start or end of a conversation, e.g. greeting, farewell, addressing, or apologies, formulas of approval/affirmation, wishes etc.
		commphras_type="not_situational"		sogenannt, meiner Meinung nach	Not situationally bound communicative phrasemes fulfil primarily text organising (and interaction organising) functions. They serve to create metacommunicative references (text internal references), to guide attention, to ensure understanding, facilitate interaction, manage communication, establish relations, or to comment utterances.

	fs_type="refphras_id"	refphras_id_type="idiom"		Fürsprecher der Jugend	An idiom is a combination of words that has a figurative meaning, i.e. its entire meaning is not compositional and does not correspond to the sum of the meanings of the single constituents (although in some cases an idiom might be transparent, i.e. the "image" it is based on might be clear; cf. Burger 2007: 98ff.).
		refphras_id_type="special_class"		ab und zu
	fs_type="refphras_notid"	refphras_notid_type="collocation"		Stellung nehmen, meiner Ansicht nach	The most typical characteristics of collocations are that they are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - lexically constrained combinations; - not (or only minimal/partially) idiomatic; - not whole sentences.

		structphras_type="concess_construction_modal"		sicherlich ..., aber/jedoch	Konzessive Konstruktion mit Modaladverbial structphras_type="preposition"		auf Grund, im Rahmen, anstelle	These are "structural phrasemes in the form of polylexical prepositions" (Konecny/Abel/Autelli/Zanas i 2016: 539; cf. also Voghera 2004: 67f.).
